Faim d'Histoire – Adventures in French History

In France and Belgium comics are loved by young and old and often find their way onto bestseller lists.

Cornelsen is now taking up this tradition with Faim d'Histoire, a series of engaging comics dealing with episodes from French history.

The people who created the comics are both experienced comic-book authors and teachers. This makes it easier to tailor the comics to the target group with only an elementary knowledge of the language. The aim is to introduce students to selected epochs in French history in an amusing way.

The series is targeted at students in their second year of French (levels A1+ and A2). Each of Jacques and Jules' adventures includes a small appendix that provides information about French society at the time and a vocabulary list.

For every volume teachers can make use of 5-7 hours of teaching material available at www.cornelsen.de/faim_dhistoire. The site also includes several worksheets ready for use in the lessons.

Nouvelle Bibliothèque Junior

This newly conceived lesson series for lower secondary school presents current texts by French authors of books for young people. The series includes well-known authors as well as new young authors. The texts have been didactically and optically arranged in the form of a “genuine” book for young people and thus provide a reading experience beyond the school teaching context.

In order to facilitate an authentic reading experience and various approaches to the reading process, the vocabulary annotations are alphabetically arranged and inserted in the book.

A differentiated typographic design takes into account the different ages of readers. For pupils in their second year who are not accustomed to reading in the foreign language, a larger font is used than for pupils in higher years.

Titles are arranged in accordance with the levels defined by the CEF.

Ciné junior: Justine et Malo

Ciné junior: Justine et Malo – seven film sequences around Justine, Malo and their friends. These have been developed for beginners at A1 level on the CEF.

Their adventures in Lyon are presented in lively scenes so that school students see an accurate and up-to-date picture of France and at the same time practise their listening and viewing comprehension.

The films can be used independently of other materials in the classroom, although they complement the contents of French courses for young people such as Réalités – Nouvelle édition and À plus!.

They develop the action using film and provide a stimulus for intercultural learning.

The photocopiable materials include worksheets and advice on how to use the medium film for comprehension purposes. They also contain practical suggestions for lessons relating to each episode.
