

Data Protection Declaration for Suppliers

Protecting your personal data is important for CORNELSEN. The following Data Protection Policy provides information about the processing of personal data.

1. Owner

The owner for the processing is the company with which the contractor enters into an agreement.

2. Contact

Suppliers can contact CORNELSEN by email. CORNELSEN uses the data generated in the process to contact you and to answer your questions. The legal basis for the data processing is Art. 6 Subs. 1 f GDPR. We have a justified interest in maintaining contact with users and being able to answer any questions they may have.

3. Account solicitation service, EU sanction list and information on the Supply Chain Due Diligence Act

Before entering into an agreement as well as during the effective contractual relationship CORNELSEN may under certain circumstances carry out the following examinations:

- Establish whether entering into the contractual relationship would infringe the EU sanction lists of EU regulations 2580/2001 and 881/2002. This investigation is legally required.
- Determining whether the commencement or continuation of the contractual relationship violates the provisions of the Supply Chain Duty of Care Act (LkSG);
- Establish the financial standing of the contractor

The legal basis for the data processing is Art. 6 Subs. 1 f or Art. 6 Subs. 1 c GDPR.

4. Deletion

CORNELSEN will delete the data processed by the contractors and in the above-mentioned inspections if they are no longer required and the deletion does not conflict with a retention period.

5. Your rights as a Supplier

As a supplier you have the right to request information about which data CORNELSEN has stored about you and for what purpose. In addition, you can correct incorrect data or have data deleted if the data were unlawfully recorded or are no longer required. You have the right to data portability. In addition, you have the right to complain to a supervisory body about the data processing taking place.

6. Information on your right to object

As a supplier you have the right to object to the processing of your personal data by CORNELSEN, in so far as there are reasons which arise from your particular situation. The precondition for this is that the data processing is carried out based on a balancing of interests.

7. Data Protection Representative

Our Data Protection Representative is also available at any time to provide information or receive your suggestions about data protection:
